

Milk slurpers

Eti Ah-Loe, 9, and her fellow Bishopdale School pupils celebrate World School Milk Day by donning cow masks and slurping milk. Thousands of children across New Zealand took part in The Big Slurp yesterday, sipping their milk at the same time. Fonterra Milk for Schools programme manager Louise Aitken said Fonterra had provided educational activity packs to schools taking part to help them understand where milk comes from. The day raised awareness about the importance of school milk programmes and the benefits of dairy nutrition on the health and wellbeing of our children.
