A capacity building webinar facilitated by the Caribbean Natural Resources Institute (CANARI) for the Global Environment Facility- Integrating Water, Land and Ecosystems Management in Caribbean Small Island Developing States (GEF IWEco) Project.

How can we engage stakeholders in natural resource management to ensure their participation in decision-making? Participatory video \(PV\) is one such process where stakeholders are involved in making their own video to tell their story in their own words. It gives stakeholders a direct voice using a powerful communication medium.

In this webinar participants will understand how to use PV to give stakeholders, particularly marginalised stakeholders, a voice in decision-making. It gives an overview of the process and possible uses of the tool. CANARI has successfully used PV to help stakeholders begin a dialogue with policy makers. The webinar will cover:

- What is PV and why use it?
- How to facilitate a PV?
- When should you consider using PV?

WEBINAR FACILITATOR

Keisha Sandy, Senior Technical Officer
Caribbean Natural Resources Institute

Keisha Sandy has been a Technical Officer at CANARI since 2010. She worked for eight years in the Tobago House of Assembly on the sustainable development of the marine and coastal environment prior to her engagement at CANARI. Keisha is responsible for CANARI's Rural Livelihoods Programme. She works with rural communities throughout the Caribbean to help them identify and develop small businesses based on the sustainable use of natural resources.

Keisha has been trained in and trained others in several participatory management tools including participatory video. She facilitated several PVs with Caribbean stakeholders and co-authored a guideline on how to facilitate the process.
