

SIDE EVENT

Driving adaptation in mountains through community- and ecosystem-based innovations

Mountain ecosystems are especially impacted by the climate crisis, undermining their natural resources, regulatory processes and the livelihoods of their peoples. Urgent action is needed that considers ecosystem in their entirety—restores biodiversity and water flows—and mobilizes the key stakeholders for economic innovation. We need to place mountains at the center of policies and interventions for climate action so that they can continue to provide globally vital goods and solutions to the planet.

© CIAT/G. Smith-Tanzania

Erin Gleeson

Anne Schulthess
International Institute for Environment and Development
anne.schulthess@iied.org

CIP thanks all donors and organizations which globally support its work through their contributions to the CGIAR Trust Fund. <https://www.cgiar.org/funders/>

This work by the International Potato Center is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International (CC BY 4.0).

To view a copy of this license, visit <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>. Permissions beyond the scope of this license may be available at: <http://www.cipotato.org/contact/>