

Gender, value chains and sustainable tourism in SIDS

Thursday 27th of May 2021

15:00 – 16:30 Rome Time

This webinar will showcase innovative practices linking gender equality, climate change and sustainable tourism in SIDS and discuss how multistakeholder partnerships can enable successful initiatives for empowering women's entrepreneurship. It will concretely address the three pillars of sustainability (social, economic and environmental) through various examples: sustainable tourism value chain in Palau; experiences of the Indigenous community of Runashitu from Ecuador; and Taselotzin Masehual Organization, which works on women's rights and economic empowerment in an Indigenous community in Mexico. Climate risks and crisis such as the COVID-19 pandemic will also be explored, considering their impacts on tourism, agribusiness development for women and food security.

Programme

Opening: Marcela Villareal, Director, Partnerships and UN Collaboration Division, FAO

Anping Ye, Director, South-South and Triangular Cooperation Division, FAO

Mette Wilkie, Director, Forestry Division, FAO

Panellists: Jane Henrici, Senior researcher and gender advisor, Sustainable Travel International

Giorgio Grussu, Project coordinator for the Coalition of Fragile Ecosystems, FAO

Rufina Villa, Secretary of the Executive Board of Taselotzin Masehual Organization, Quetzalan, Mexico

Nely Shiguango, Technical Advisor of the Indigenous community of Renashitu, Ecuador

Moderator: Angelica Jacome Daza, Director, Office for SIDS, LDCs and LLDCs, FAO

Interpretation available in English, French and Spanish

Registration link: https://fao.zoom.us/webinar/register/WN_4Nj7uFhhTbiBbyKEv7iYFQ

For more information, please contact: Alejandra.Safa@fao.org or Lea.Berthelin@fao.org